

ABSTRACT:

A system for automatically classifying and counting people, such as supermarket customers, and associated objects such as shopping trolleys. One or more video cameras view an area traversed by the customers and the video data is processed, in real time, to allocate each customer to one or more of a set of predetermined categories in dependence upon recognition criteria developed to permit reliable classification of customers in relation to the various categories.